

Suspending of Studies

Full time students

If you are thinking about taking time out from university, there are financial implications to be aware of. The actual costs will differ depending on your individual circumstances and at which point in the year you suspend your studies, please see below for more information.

What happens to my accommodation?

If you are leaving any university managed accommodation before the end of your contract, please refer to your Accommodation Agreement and Early Departure Policy. You need also to be aware that if anything needs to be replaced or if cleaning needs to be carried out following your departure, then you will be invoiced for the costs. If you are with an external accommodation provider, private landlord or letting agent, please refer to your tenancy agreement because you will have signed a fixed term contract.

Do I have to repay back any scholarships/bursaries from YSJ?

If you are eligible for the Aspire Scheme your account will be suspended and you will no longer have access to the funds. For bursaries and scholarships, the university will be in contact with you in regards to any under/ overpayments. If you are receiving any other funding from the University or an external agency, please contact them direct for advice.

NHS (LSF) Students

The University will inform the NHS Learning Support Fund of your change in attendance; however, you should also contact the NHS Learning Support Fund (NHS LSF) helpline as soon as possible on 0300 330 0521 to enable them to stop any further payments. The NHS will then work out if you are owed any payments and contact you to advise.

Please note: if you suspend your course before the 31st August and you have been in receipt of the NHS Training Grant, you may be in an overpayment situation because the Grant is assessed up until this date.

Do I have to repay back my loans?

If you suspend your studies Student Finance will reassess the funding you have received. Your loan entitlement will be recalculated based on your period of attendance until you suspended, the university will use your last date of attendance as your suspended date and inform Student Finance of this.

If any of your loan covers the period after you've left your course, this counts as an overpayment and you'll need to repay it straight away.

Once you have been reassessed, the Student Loans Company will send you a letter to confirm any overpayments and when these need to be repaid. If you need to make any repayments straight away, please contact them to arrange this in a way which is affordable for you.

You will also be sent a new Notification of Entitlement letter. This will show your reduced loan entitlement.

If you suspend your studies due to ill health and the university confirms this with Student Finance, you can continue to receive a further 60 days of all your support without providing supporting evidence to Student Finance. For the university to be able to return you as suspending on ill health you will need to state this on your application for suspension of studies and will need to provide substantial medical evidence.

For further information on suspension of studies and the implications, please visit our Suspension of Studies webpage.

For students who are funded by US Federal Loans please contact the US Loans team at usloans@yorks.ac.uk for further information.

When do I re-apply for next year's funding?

You can re-apply for funding once the applications become available; this is normally in February/ March time. If you are returning mid-year, Student Finance will be notified of your return date and will pro-rata any funding you are eligible for. If you are repeating the full year, you will need to make sure that you state on the application that this is a repeat year. This will be asked in your funding application.

Repeating a year (Student Finance)

If you are repeating a year following your period of suspended study, this can affect your student finance. The number of years that you can get student finance is normally calculated as:

Length of current course + 1 year - number of years of previous study = funding years remaining

Even if you only attended a course for a short time, it will count as a year of previous study.

If you have Compelling Personal Reasons (CPR) as to why you are suspending from university, such as illness or bereavement, you can write a letter of Compelling Personal Reasons to Student Finance so that the year in question does not count when they are calculating the funding years that you have remaining.

For more information on this, please visit Going back to uni or repeating a year

Repeating a Year (NHS)

If you are an allied health student and you repeat all or part of the academic year you may not be eligible for the NHS Training Grant during that year, unless you have extenuating circumstances. Eligible students can receive up to 12 months additional NHS LSF payments if they are required to:

- repeat some, or all, of the previous academic year or
- extend their course beyond the original completion date

You will need to demonstrate within the course change request submitted through the university portal that additional funding is required because of extenuating circumstances. Once this is submitted, the NHS will review the course change request; if they need any further information, they will contact you at this stage. It is important you provide as much information as possible when submitting your initial request to avoid any delays. For more information, please contact the NHS LSF Helpline directly on 0300 330 0521.

Further Information

If you need more information or your circumstances aren't covered here, you can contact Student Finance on 0300 100 0607 between 8am and 8pm, Monday to Friday and Saturday between 9am and 4pm. Alternatively, you can chat with an adviser via webchat on your online account, Monday to Friday between 9am and 5.30pm.
