Introduction and Special Features

The York St John MSc in Leadership and Management aims to recruit a diverse range of students who share a passion for Leadership and Management more generally. As a student on this programme you will be studying alongside others who wish to move into or further develop their careers in Leadership and Management.

As a student on this programme you will follow discipline-specific modules ensuring required depth and sustained investigation. Through the development of an integrated and critically aware understanding of management from a leadership and people perspective, the programme involves you in a demanding process of personal and leadership development, through engagement with project work for your own and/or external businesses.

There are nine ‘taught’ modules on the MSc Leadership and Management programme and they include some specific leadership and people focussed modules; Leadership and Management, People Management, Organisational Change & Culture, and Leadership and Management Coaching. The Business School has specific expertise in Coaching and Mentoring and you will be exposed to the latest thinking in this subject area. In addition to the leadership and people focussed modules, you will also learn about business more widely through exploring and analysing the business and critically evaluating the role of sustainability within the modern business environment. These modules include; Business and Sustainability, International Business Strategy, Project Management and Introduction to Research in Contemporary Business Issues and Applied Research in Contemporary Business Issues All students on the MSc programmes within York St John Business School complete a module of independent study which is titled the Research Investigation. This module provides you with the opportunity to investigate in depth an area of particular interest to you that links with your programme of study. You will be supported in conducting this research by an academic from your field of interest. To support you in being able to conduct this work you will take Researching Contemporary Business Issues modules, that all students on the MSc programmes within the Business School study. These modules provide the opportunity to engage with current academic and practitioner business debate and encourage students to explore a range of relevant business topics. These modules are designed in such a way that promotes a multi-disciplinary approach, for example, you will receive input from a variety of disciplines (business and non-business) thus allowing you to see business issues from a variety of perspectives.

The curriculum has been carefully designed to ensure that there is a balance of theory to application and that there regular opportunities for you to engage with the world of business. There will be regular guest input from business professionals, case studies and projects in modules that will allow you to apply your knowledge of the theory to a range of real-world business scenarios.

The programme offers opportunities to reflect upon, evaluate and apply key Leadership and Management theories and concepts as well as encouraging creative and innovative thinking in the application of relevant management models. As you progress through your studies you will not just be taught academic theory related to the subject. You will be encouraged and supported to develop skills that will prepare you for developing your career in management, especially related to leadership and management.

Admissions Criteria

You must meet the University's general entry criteria for postgraduate study.

If your first language is not English, you need to take an IELTS test or an equivalent qualification accepted by the University (see https://www.yorksj.ac.uk/international/how-to-apply/english-language-requirements/).

If you do not have traditional qualifications, you may be eligible for entry on the basis of Accredited Prior (Experiential) Learning (APL/APEL). We also consider applications for entry with advanced standing.
