Introduction and Special Features

This is a flexible programme that allows you to study a range of subjects related to Christian theology and ministry. Although historical aspects of the Christian faith are not excluded as objects of study, the emphasis on the programme is on contemporary expressions of Christian religion and practical, rather than systematic, theology. You can study this programme if your interests are purely theoretical, but there are many opportunities to link theological study with the practice of faith and Christian ministry in particular. Most students will study for an MA award, though it is also possible to exit with a Postgraduate Certificate or Diploma, and the programme's "pay as you learn" structure allows part-time students to pay for modules when they take them.

The Theology & Ministry award is aimed at a wide range of students who may or may not be in some sort of Christian ministry. Modules are taught in ten evening sessions or in blocks on three Saturdays. You can complete the award in a year of full-time study, though most students are part time and take 2-4 years. You have a lot of flexibility to shape the content and length of study on this programme. If you are able, you can study up to two modules from our MA Contemporary Religion programme, where modules are taught during the day. However, you would need to ensure that you take at least two Theology & Ministry taught modules and the Theology & Ministry dissertation to receive this award. See the Progression and Graduation Requirements section for the exact requirements of the various awards.

Admissions Criteria

In addition to the University's general entry criteria for postgraduate study, you must have an upper second-class or first-class honours degree (or equivalent). This can be in any subject, though priority will be given to students with degrees in humanities and especially in theology or religious studies.

Applicants with a lower second-class degree and knowledge of theology and/or religious studies may be accepted onto the programme following an interview. This includes applicants... who may have a lower second-class degree in another subject area and who have evidence of having studied theology or religious studies at certificate or diploma level (for example as part of ministry training).
If your first language is not English, you need to take an IELTS test or an equivalent qualification accepted by the University (see https://www.yorksj.ac.uk/international/how-to-apply/english-language-requirements/). You must pass at 6.5 or higher in all four aspects of the test (listening, reading, speaking and writing).

Associate Student entry route
If you do not qualify for direct entry to the programme you might be offered enrolment as an associate student on a single module. This depends on your qualifications and experience, and how you do on your interview. If you are accepted as an associate student you will be given extra support by your module tutor and help in preparing the assignment. Students who successfully pass the module may enrol on the MA programme in the following academic year, and transfer their credit automatically. Associate students can only register for a single module, and therefore this is not a suitable entry for full-time students, including international students.

International students International students will be admitted through the procedures of York St John International, according to the prevailing University and programme rules.

Accredited Prior Experience and Learning (APEL) Candidates for a Masters award with suitable prior learning or experience may be exempt from up to two of the optional taught modules (60 credits). Normal university rules for credit transfer will apply, and equivalency of learning outcomes to the programme outcomes will need to be demonstrated through the usual University procedures. Applications based on experience will need to be evidenced by a portfolio, and you will be charged for portfolio assessment. APEL will not be given towards the award of Postgraduate Certificate or Postgraduate Diploma. For more information see the University policy document: Accredited Prior (Experiential) Learning (APL/APEL).

Programme Aims
1. To offer students the opportunity to gain advanced knowledge and critical understanding of a range of issues in Christian theology, biblical studies, and Christian ministry and mission.
2. To offer students the opportunity to study in depth particular topics related to the nature and expression of religion in contemporary societies.
3. To encourage students to tailor the content of their learning according to their particular interests or professional needs, either by specialising in areas such as Christian theology or chaplaincy studies, or by generalising in the study of religion.
4. To develop the ability of students to study and research independently, at an advanced level, specific questions concerning Christian theology and ministry, chaplaincy, or religious studies.

Programme Learning Outcomes
Level M / FHEQ L7
All students who complete the MA Theology and Ministry successfully will:
1. be able to communicate the results of study concisely in ways appropriate to the discipline, showing awareness and critical understanding of the complexities of issues;
2. be able to devise, plan and execute a research project demonstrating awareness of ethical issues, critical distance from sources, and the ability to think independently and creatively;
3. be able to integrate theory and practice, reflecting critically on their own standpoint and practice in creative and discipline-specific ways;
4. have advanced skills in studying particular aspects of Christian theology and ministry through independent enquiry, working with peers, and engaging selectively and critically with a range of primary and secondary material from traditional and online sources;
5. have systematic knowledge and critical understanding of how various aspects of theology and ministry are understood in different contexts and discourses, including good understanding of methodological and hermeneutical issues related to the discipline.

Programme Structure

Teaching is offered on one evening a week in term time or on three Saturdays per module. You can do this full time over 1 year or part-time over 2-4 years. MA awards are based on taking four 30-credit modules and a 60-credit dissertation of 12,000 words.

Your final award will depend on which route you do and how you combine modules across routes or within programmes. Full time students will take the Independent Study module, or elect to take a taught module from the MA Contemporary Religion programme. The requirements for each set of named awards are set out under graduation requirements.
Teaching, Learning and Assessment

The programme will aim to create opportunities for you to interact with tutors, peers and the subject area in ways that allow you to pursue your own goals and interests. You will be expected to be proactive in shaping the way that you use the programme to achieve your learning objectives. Teaching will come in different forms which can be roughly grouped according to module type:

Taught modules will introduce you to relevant ideas and key theoretical frameworks, exposing you to current research, and helping you to develop independence of thought and self-directed learning. Teaching will involve some lecturing but also extended discussions and debates.

Research modules (dissertations) will be supervised by someone with knowledge in the topic. This kind of teaching offers in-depth individual tutoring that will guide your work on a particular research project.

Assessment

The assessment on this programme is deliberately less varied than on the MA Contemporary Religion, which is primarily designed to teach skills. The aim of this programme is not necessarily to develop practical skills in ministry, but to develop critical and reflective skills that can be used to assess and develop ministry.

The distinction between learning and assessment is less clear at Masters Level because so much of the learning that takes place is in the process of producing assignments. This programme will deliberately use assessment not simply to see if you know something, but also as a means of enabling you to learn.

Methods of assessment will include:

1. Written assignments for taught modules and independent studies.
2. Dissertations.
3. Proposals.

Informal feedback (i.e. comment on work that does not include a pass/fail assessment or mark) will be offered in a variety of ways according to the module. For most modules this will be comments on drafts of essays, but for some it might be verbal feedback on class presentations or class exercises. Feedback will also be given as part of the required assessments which are specified for each module.

Progression and Graduation Requirements

The University’s general regulations for postgraduate awards apply to this programme.

Any modules that must be passed for progression or award are indicated in the Programme Structure section.

In addition, the following programme-specific regulations apply in respect of exit awards and graduation:

- For the Postgraduate Certificate Theology and Ministry, credit must comprise two 30-credit Theology & Ministry modules (excluding MTM007 Independent Study).
- For the Postgraduate Diploma Theology and Ministry, credit must comprise at least three 30-credit Theology & Ministry modules (one of which could be MTM007 Independent Study).
- For the MA Theology and Ministry, credit must comprise at least two Theology & Ministry modules (neither of which can be MTM007 Independent Study) and MTM008 Dissertation (Theology & Ministry).
