Introduction and special features

Joint Honours programmes give students the opportunity to combine two subjects from a range of areas in a structured way. The selected pairings are designed to complement one another and allow students to have a significant amount of choice and flexibility in relation to their learning experience. In addition, the Joint Honours pairings involve students engaging in a range of learning and teaching experiences and assessment opportunities.

The Education Studies and English Literature programme is built around a number of key dispositions that the team wishes to develop with our students. Change is a constant, in that all students need to be prepared for change, and that change will happen no matter what. The important thing is to be able to understand this. Critique enables students to deal with change; it allows them to question why things are as they are, who is driving change, and to engage with their own responses to this. Creativity allows students to look at their world in a number of ways, not just accepting it as it is, and also looking for different ways to respond to it. Curiosity is about wanting to find out more, and to understand themselves and others, and to know how to find out in a coherent and ethical manner. Through change, critique, creativity and curiosity, it is hoped that Education Studies and English Literature students will care about themselves, others and the environment, and to challenge both themselves and others in their ongoing quest to understand themselves and the world as it is, as it could be, and as it should be.

Education Studies is concerned with understanding how people develop and learn throughout their lives, and the nature of knowledge and critical engagement with ways of knowing and understanding. It offers intellectually rigorous analysis of educational processes, systems and approaches, and their cultural, societal, political, historical, and economic contexts.

Graduates are able to participate in and contest changing discourses exemplified by reference to debate about values, personal and social engagement, and how these relate to communities and societies. Students have opportunities to develop their critical capabilities through the selection, analysis and synthesis of relevant perspectives, and to be able to justify different positions on educational matters. They will engage in a critique of current policies and practice and challenge assumptions. An education studies course provides the knowledge, understanding and critical analysis to inform current and future professionals.

Transferable skills:

Education Studies graduates will be able to:

- Construct and communicate oral and written arguments
- Use information and communication technology (ICT), including word processing, databases, internet communication, information retrieval and online searches
- Interpret and present relevant numerical information
- Work with others, as a result of the development of interpersonal skills, to demonstrate the capacity to plan, to share goals, and work as a member of a team
- Improve their own learning and performance, including the development of study and research skills, information retrieval, and a capacity to plan and manage learning, and to reflect on their own learning
- Analyse, synthesise, evaluate, and identify problems and solutions.

Students will engage in a work placement at Level 5, and will also have the opportunity to study abroad.

English Literature is a rich and vibrant area of study. At YSJU, we are a dynamic, engaged, and research-active team who are committed to providing our students with a cutting-edge education. By studying English Literature, you will have the opportunity to learn about a range of different genres, historical periods, and literary forms. Our philosophy is simple: words matter. Words shape the world we live in (books can and have changed the world) and the connections between the written page and the concerns of the 'real' world are a crucial part of the programme. Overall, the degree will enable you to develop your expertise as a reader and critic of a range of literary materials, whilst also supporting you in the development of a portfolio of professional skills which will aid you in the wider job market. As you become adept at independent learning, you will become a more sophisticated reader of texts, and you will find that your confidence as a writer and as a critic will increase as your degree progresses.

Through the course of a wide-ranging suite of modules, you will develop an extensive knowledge of both classic and contemporary texts, and will have the opportunity to gain some professional experience on our dedicated employability module, 'Literature at Work'. The choice of modules on offer will help you to develop your own interests and allow you to shape your degree accordingly. For example, students can choose to follow an historical pathway that might include modules such as 'Revolution and Response', which examines writing from the late eighteenth century and early nineteenth century, or 'The Victorian Novel', which focuses on nineteenth-century fiction. In addition, students can focus on other specialised areas represented by modules including 'Mapping America', 'Sick Novels: Literature and Disease', 'Science Fiction for Survival', and 'Gothic Origins'. We pride ourselves on a diverse and stimulating syllabus, and you might find yourself studying Native American writing, prison narratives, radical poetry, avant-garde writing, political polemics, Civil Rights literature, speculative fiction, LGBT rights literature, experimental writing, and literature of the Caribbean, as well as canonical writers such as Shakespeare, Dickens, and Austen, all as part of your English Literature degree.

A team of research-active academics who are all recognised in their respective specialisms will facilitate and guide your learning. We use a variety of assessment methods to help you develop different types of learning. You will not sit any traditional exams as part of your degree in English Literature, and instead you will be encouraged to try new forms of writing. In addition to more traditional assessments such as the essay, you might be asked to write a blog post, to compile a research portfolio, or even to curate an online exhibition. Field trips are an integral part of the programme, and students in recent years have had the opportunity to visit London, Stratford-upon-Avon, and Whitby, as well as local sites including Castle Howard and York Theatre Royal.

During your degree, you will develop a range of subject-specific and transferable skills. As well as having the opportunity to become an adept reader, critic, writer, writer and researcher, you will also become highly skilled in critical thinking, problem solving, constructing and developing an argument, time-management, public speaking, and project management. These skills are all valued highly by employers, and you have the chance to develop more professional skills on our bespoke employability module 'Literature at Work'. On this module, you will be able to experience an external work placement, or choose to work on a team project (such as designing a publication or curating a small exhibition). Students regularly contribute to our popular Literature blog, Point Zero, which is an excellent way to gain relevant professional experience and exposure for your critical and creative perspectives.

Learning, teaching and assessment

To maximise the full potential of all students studying on BA (Hons) English Literature and Education Studies, the programme will focus on:

- The process of transition to ensure that you are able to benefit from a full and rewarding undergraduate experience.
- The development of lifelong learning skills, particularly in relation to developing your ability to be able to reflect upon your own learning.
- The development of skills that will help to effectively involve you in critical reflection and analysis of research, policy and practice.
- Prioritising teaching that will support learning experiences that are stimulating, appropriate and effective.
- Fostering partnerships which will help to ensure inclusive and appropriate assessment, learning & teaching practices.

Education Studies

Our intention is to provide a secure foundation upon which you can build, explore and conceptualise the broader implications of the discipline, thus challenging you to develop your critical thinking skills and engagement in analytical discussion. We aim to foster a strong and supportive relationship with our students in remaining aware of each individual's learning needs across the programme. Beyond the classroom environment, we will provide you with individual academic support both via email and in face-to-face tutorials.

Teaching and learning strategies will be tailored towards the context of each module. Learning and teaching methods are designed to enable you to attain and demonstrate achievement of the specified outcomes contained in the module specifications. The BA (Hons) English Literature and Education Studies programme will use a diverse range of teaching and learning strategies which will focus on equipping you with the skills and knowledge required to be effective and successful students. English Literature and Education Studies is designed so that there is a progressive shift in the overall balance of time you spend in independent compared to tutor-supported learning. Level 4 has increased contact time to ensure that you have a sound grounding in the subject area, which is then gradually reduced through Levels 5 and 6 in order to develop student autonomy, whilst still providing a supportive environment. Work at Level 5 is characterised by more contexts where students determine the direction of their work. This may be, for example, where tutors ask them to find their own data to explore, or set up their own research direction within material.

Research skills are embedded within modules, for example, work on ethics, project design and argumentation skills. Skills and subject knowledge introduced at Level 4 and enhanced at Level 5 are consolidated at Level 6. Students are expected to be maximally self-reliant and to learn how to use their tutors as one resource among many. In terms of subject knowledge, they are expected to be able to see some of the limitations of theoretical approaches, while also using knowledge gained over the previous two years to problem-solve and critically evaluate different literature and educational phenomena. Research skills are embedded in modules as students are introduced to library skills, academic writing, data analysis and using web tools for analysis. Students are encouraged to use each other as a resource, as well as using the expertise of staff. The programme website supports the culture of a learning community, and students are introduced at the outset to its functionality.

The teaching and learning strategy includes lectures, seminars, case studies, group work, report writing and aims to be accessible to a mixture of learning styles and interactive activities. A series of key lectures for each module will provide you with an introduction to the main themes, theoretical concepts and debates. Seminars aim to provide you with the opportunity to debate and discuss the themes raised by lectures and self-directed study. This will provide you with opportunities to have a deeper understanding of the issues covered in the modules and encourages an environment in which you can communicate and discuss the subject matter with other students. You will also be encouraged to take the initiative and work towards a self-directed approach under the negotiation, facilitation and observation of the module leader. Guest speakers from appropriate organisations also enhance the lecture sessions.

There is an appropriate blend of formative feedback and summative assessments across the individual modules. This is emphasised at Level 4 whereby the word count of 3,000 per module is for the summative assessment, but in order to ease the transition into academic study within Higher Education there will also be formative feedback, which may be written or verbal. This will be particularly apparent in semester 1, as the modules support each other in developing the skills you need to succeed in Higher Education. In this respect, formative feedback will be provided prior to submission of the final summative assessment, which maximises the potential for you to engage in productive dialogue throughout the module. Formal and informal feedback including reviews and discussion will also be used to inform you of your progress and facilitate learning and personal development planning. Assessment criteria are directly related to the specified learning outcomes for the programme of study. Academic Tutorials will also support the feedback process, as your academic tutor discusses your feedback with you and suggests support as necessary.

We believe that self-motivation has a crucial role to play in learning. What motivates us and how other people can influence our self-motivation is a very complex area, but one in which our understanding is growing. We now know that success itself does not necessarily motivate. It depends to a great extent on why we think we have been successful in our learning. Even the performance of very able students can plateau or even diminish if they believe that they have reached what they consider to be the limits of their intelligence i.e. that their level of intelligence is fixed and they are powerless to increase their capacity to learn.

Ultimately, being wrong, making mistakes and struggling to understand or to do something is a necessary and formative part of learning. Formative tasks are also an integral part of the Level 5 and 6 modules so that you can receive informal feedback on both your academic work and the development of critical thinking around the subjects under discussion. Here, feedback is seen as a key tool that can support you in refining your understandings and/or knowledge as well as enabling you to build more powerful ideas and capabilities.

We believe that good feedback practice:

1. Facilitates the development of self-assessment (reflection) in learning.
2. Encourages dialogue around learning.
3. Helps clarify what good performance is (goals, criteria, expected standards).
4. Provides opportunities to close the gap between current and desired performance.
5. Delivers high quality information to students about their learning.
6. Encourages positive motivational beliefs and self-esteem.
7. Provides information to the teaching team that can be used to help shape the delivery and content of the programme.

English Literature:

The aims of all our teaching is to help you to become a better writer and literary critic, to challenge you to consider new ideas and concepts, and to support you in understanding the complex connections between literature and contemporary society. Literature is a dialogic discipline: that is, informed discussions and debates are a crucial part of the learning process. We do not want students to be passive learners, but instead expect you all to be actively engaged and involved with your degree subject.

We use a range of teaching styles and settings to help support you during your time at University. You will attend lectures, seminars (groups of students with a tutor), tutorials (one-to-one meetings with a tutor), workshops, and experience collaborative learning (working with your fellow students), events, field trips, as well as independent study sessions, and times when you will need to use online resources through the University's Virtual Learning Environment.

Your first year with us is about supporting you in making the transition to university-level study. You will be assigned your own Academic Tutor, a member of staff who will meet with you and other students on a weekly basis during your first semester at YSJU. Modules such as 'Writing, Research and Literature' have been specially designed to help you adapt to the University environment and the requirements of the subject. As you progress to your second and third year, you will be able to shape your degree according to your own research interests. You can choose to specialise in a certain genre, historical period, or literary form. We have a diverse range of modules for you to choose from, and you will have lots of opportunities to study types of literature that you might not have experienced previously (such as, for example, Caribbean literature, utopian writing, and creative non-fiction).

There are no exams, and your English Literature degree will be assessed through coursework. As well as writing essays, however, there are other assessment opportunities designed to help you develop new skills and prepare for graduate employment. You will encounter a wide range of assessment, including portfolios, close-reading exercises, and opportunities for reflective writing. Some modules are assessed by one piece of coursework (usually a portfolio) and you will have the chance to work on this throughout the semester. The feedback you will receive focuses on how you can improve your work for future assessment, and we encourage all students to keep a feedback folder to help keep track of their academic development. You will have the chance to work with published and professional writers, as our resident Royal Literary Fellow is available for additional tutorials and writing support.

In your final year, you will be ready to take on a bigger role in the management of your learning. You might find yourself leading a class discussion, or doing a non-assessed presentation in a seminar. You will write a dissertation (an extended project that runs for the whole academic year) on the subject of your choice, and with the support of an academic supervisor. In many ways, this is in the intellectual culmination of your degree, as you become an independent researcher and are required to manage your own academic project. Many of our students note that this is one of the most enjoyable sections of their degree, as they are specialising in a literary topic that they are passionate about, and are putting into practice the skills they have accrued during their time at York St John University.
