Introduction and Special Features

Music: Education and Community at York St John University is a dynamic part of the academic and cultural life of the campus. We are committed to developing community practitioners, who have experience and understanding of performance and composition. The programme aims to give students the grounding to make a significant impact on the fields in which they work after graduation.

Two distinctive features of the programme are an emphasis on ensemble music making, involving staff and students from across all years working together to achieve successful performances, and the integration of all styles and genres of music. This cooperative and inclusive ethos is central to music at YSJU. There are also opportunities for collaborative work with your colleagues on related programmes such as theatre, dance or film. There is an emphasis on group work to develop your understanding and awareness of group dynamics, and the importance of cooperation and collaboration in work environments. This is also reinforced through modules which address ensemble leadership and employability.

You will experience work-based learning in educational and other community environments. The programme has close links with York Hospital which are integral to the faculty's Converge programme (a partnership between York St John University and mental health service providers in the York region). We are also instrumental in York Music Hub, which works with local schools and other organisations to provide quality music education in the region. Additionally, the International Centre for Community Music (ICCM) is based at YSJU, and offers a forum for community research teaching, scholarship, professional and pedagogic practice.

You will have opportunities to further your composition and performance skills by engaging with professional musicians in composition workshops and performance masterclasses.

You can audition for the University Chamber Choir, which each year visits a famous cathedral or concert hall to perform with a number of fellow university choirs. A 4-day trip to Paris with visits to a cabaret, concerts and related museums is offered in the final year of the programme.

The programme also runs a Tuesday lunchtime concert series, offering many opportunities actively to engage with music as performer, composer, conductor, critic, and in all cases as a listener. There are also a number of professional concerts as well as evening concerts featuring our larger ensembles.

Please be aware that in your third year you may be required to pay for any necessary DBS check.

Admissions Criteria

You must meet the University's general entry criteria for undergraduate study. If your first language is not English, you need to take an IELTS test or an equivalent qualification accepted by the University (see <https://www.yorksj.ac.uk/international/how-to-apply/english-language-requirements/>).

If you do not have traditional qualifications, you may be eligible for entry on the basis of Accredited Prior \(Experiential\) Learning \(APL/APEL\). We also consider applications for entry with advanced standing.

Non-standard applicants will be considered on a case-by-case basis.

Programme Aims

The Music: Education and Community programme has the following subject specific programme aims:

- to offer a musically broad-based and eclectic curriculum, exploring a wide range of styles and genres, reflecting global diversity in music
- to place music in the context of artistic, social, political and cultural change
- to present a contemporary and relevant programme, allowing students to explore music as it is today
- to allow students to become reflective practitioners
- to develop skills in running workshops in community settings
- to offer students opportunities to gain experience of working with music in a variety of educational and community settings
- to prioritise group skills, teamwork and collaboration
- to encourage multidisciplinary practice
- to offer opportunities for students to engage in innovative practice
- to offer opportunities for students to engage with digital technologies in music
- to enhance the employability of our musicians, encouraging the use of professional working standards

Programme Learning Outcomes

Level 1 / FHEQ L4

- 4.1 Recognise and identify by ear essential components of a musical language.

- 6.5 Synthesise insights, theories and knowledge of Community Music to produce an extended and coherent piece of written work

- 6.6 Demonstrate the ability to work collaboratively, creating an original musical project in the community

Programme Structure

In the first year of the programme the modules you take are shared with all music students. In addition, the module Perspectives on Music is shared with the Music Production students. This will give you a grounding in practical skills and the academic understanding you will need in the later years of your course. In your second year modules, such as Improvisation and Ensemble Performance, are taken by all music students in addition to Music in Education and Lifelong Learning and Music in the Community modules. You will have a choice of Solo Performance or Composition. You will also take New Music, New Ideas (Music: Education and Community) which encourages exploration of less familiar ideas and discovery and use of new approaches and aspects of recent music. This combination of modules offered provides a creative and practical foundation to progress on to more complex projects and content in year 3. Enterprise and Employability will focus on strengthening your ability to work independently to develop your research and professional skills in preparation for careers beyond university. Additionally, you will undertake a dissertation covering a choice of topics related to music in education and the community. Furthermore, Collaborative Project, has a practical emphasis allowing the opportunity to work with students in other subjects areas, and other musicians as well.

Teaching, Learning and Assessment

The teaching of music at YSJU integrates many different approaches appropriate to the varied nature of the subject. There are some lectures, but most staff-led learning sessions are in the form of seminars or workshops, with individual instrumental or vocal lessons. Throughout the course we integrate theory and practical work. Assessment is carried out through presentations, performances and the submission of portfolios and essays. There are no formal examinations.

In addition to the formal teaching in scheduled classes, you will have many other opportunities to learn through practical experience provided by the large number of music ensembles active on campus and throughout the city. Instrumental and vocal development is further supported by the provision of individual instrumental or vocal lessons. Additionally, you will be encouraged to attend the regular series of lunchtime and evening concerts promoted on the campus. Throughout the degree you are encouraged to engage with a wide range of musical styles and cultures and to relate your music making to other performance disciplines and to educational and community contexts.

Music has developed a number of international links and partnerships with overseas institutions, offering you the opportunity to study abroad in your second year. The Music in Education and Lifelong Learning and the Music in the Community modules will give you substantial experience of work-based learning. Individual instrumental lessons are again available in your second year if you choose to take the Solo Performance module.

As you approach the end of your degree there is an increasing emphasis on independent learning, supported by small group and individual tutorials. In your final year, you will plan and execute work more autonomously (both individually and part of a team), and take increasing responsibility for the process of your own creativity and learning. Several level 6 modules are concerned with professionalism and employability, preparing you for life beyond university.
